

Talha Sattar
Founder and President of Nimble

Talha Sattar is the Founder and President of Nimble, the prescription management platform that helps independent pharmacies compete, grow, and deliver better patient outcomes. Since founding Nimble in 2014, Talha has been a tireless advocate for independent pharmacies — operators he sees as the heart of American healthcare and the primary antidote to the consolidation and closures reshaping the chain pharmacy landscape. Under his leadership, Nimble has grown into a platform connecting independent pharmacies, patients, and life science companies — giving pharmacies the digital infrastructure to reduce first-fill abandonment, capture more revenue, and serve as a trusted destination for care. Before Nimble, Talha worked at McKinsey & Company, advising clients on strategy and operations across healthcare and consumer sectors. He holds an MBA from the Stanford Graduate School of Business and a BS in Industrial Engineering and Economics from Northwestern University. He is based in Palo Alto, CA.
